 Extracts from "Medals of the British Army, and how they were Won," by Thomas Carter (London, Groombridge & Sons, Paternoster Row.) Page 181, "The Victoria Cross." Forty-fourth Regiment. Sergeant William McWheeney. Volunteered as sharpshooter at the commencement of the siege, and was in charge of the party of the 44th Regiment; was always vigilant and active, and signalized himself on the 26th of October, 1854, when one of his party, Private John Keane, 44th Regiment, was dangerously wounded in the Woronzoff Road, at the time the sharpshooters were repulsed from the Quarries by overwhelming numbers. Sergeant McWheeney, on his return, took the wounded man on his back, and brought him to a place of safety. This was under a very heavy fire. He was also the means of saving the life of Corporal Courtenay. This man was one of the sharpshooters, and was severely wounded in the head, on the 5th of December, 1854. Sergeant McWheeney brought him from under fire, and dug a slight cover with his bayonet, where the two remained until dark, when they retired. Sergeant McWheeney volunteered for the advanced guard of Major-General Eyre's brigade in the Cemetery, on the 18th of June, 1855, and was never absent from duty during the war. This cross was presented by Her Majesty on the return of the troops from the Crimea.

and the Zulu South African War Medal, one clasp, 1878 (4202, Sergt.-Major J. Allen, 80th Foot), a most unique, rare and highly interesting lot 6

 Allen entered the army as a drummer boy the year previous to the Indian Mutiny, where he won his first medal, gaining his second as corporal, his third (temperance medal) as sergeant, his fourth as colour-sergeant, and his fifth and sixth as sergeant-major of his regiment. He served for 22 years, and only died in 1885, near Portsmouth, sincerely respected and regretted. The fact of his being awarded two separate India General Service Medals, each with a clasp, is probably unique, and makes this lot especially valuable, the usual practice being to merely add an extra clasp.
